

Monthly Newsletter

Issue 38: April 2017

News Updates

TC Allison Justus has been published! Her collection of poems, Solstice to Solstice to Solstice: A Year of Sunrises in Poetry is available through Alternating Current Press. You can check it out here.

A number of interesting and helpful blog posts have found their way to the MTWP office. Here's a sampling:

For a rich article about feedback that will give you much to mull over as the school year winds down and even into the summer, check out this story.

For a reminder of the strategies that help students become fluent and life-long readers, see this article.

Finally, for a provocative post about teaching without assigning any grades until the end of the semester, see this story about two high school teachers in Washington.

Upcoming Opportunities

April 29 Saturday Seminars

Guided Writing in Intervention (RTI)

facilitated by Ashley Whitaker

and

Speaking before Writing with ELL Students

facilitated by Brenda Mulanda

For more information and registration, visit www.middletnwritingproject.org/saturday-seminars